Wage Judgment In Hands Of Sheriff

A judgment for back wages to Cowichan Copper Co. miners is in the hands of the county sheriff.

Still unpaid for September despite a promise by Aetna Investment Corp., the miners are putting their hopes in provincial labor department efforts to obtain more than $40,000 owing about 120 former employees.

Cowichan's Sunro mine at Jordan River shut down Sept. 16 under management of Aetna, which promised to pay back wages from the proceeds of sale of copper concentrates.

The sale was to have gone through two weeks ago and $15,000 interim payment made a few days later.

Counsel for the miners said the Labor Relations Board had granted a certificate of judgment against Cowichan, the actual employer and owner of the property.

If the certificate is acted upon, the sheriff could seize sufficient of Cowichan's chattels to cover the back wages payable according to a list held by the labor department.
