RAIL STRIKE IS AVERTED; YEAR TO RESTORE PAY

Unions Accept Offer of Full Restoration by April 1, 1938

MEN HAD VOTED FOR WALK-OUT

Pay Increases to Be Made Every Two Months

MONTREAL, March 29 (CP)—A compromise today averted a paralyzing strike of Canadian railway labor.

Going beyond their original concessions, the two major railways agreed to grant their employees full restoration by April 1, 1938, of 10 per cent wage cuts imposed during the depression.

The men, threatening strike as an alternative, had sought full return of their pre-depression wage scale by the end of this year. Up until the end of last week, the furthest the railway would go was to offer them their full pay back by the end of July, 1938.

What was done at negotiation meetings today, apparently, was to split the difference. The men gained a month in the time of complete restoration offered them before.

SETTLEMENT APPROVED

Neither side had quarrel with the final settlement. A statement issued on behalf of the men and the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific railways said there was "mutual satisfaction" on the part of the "parties to the dispute."

Planes Wheel and Dip as B. C. Pays Japanese Prince Tribute

Thousands Welcome Brother of Emperor Upon Arrival at Vancouver; Over 200 Fishing Vessels Gather in the Harbor

ROCKETS FIRED; WAR VETERANS FORM CORDON; FLAG RAISED AT PROSPECT PT.

VANCOUVER, March 29 (CP)—The Japanese emperor's eldest brother came to Canada tonight in a ship named for peace and expressed his firm conviction that the traditional friendship between his country and the Dominion would become "even more friendly" in future years.

As 500 frock-coated Canadian-Japanese lined the flag-bedecked wharf and thousands of others watched from the streets above, the motorship Heian Maru—Peace Ship—brought the 35-year-old Prince Yasuhiro Chichibu and his princess to the Canadian mainland.

Five hundred war veterans and citizens of Vancouver's Japanese colony took off their silk hats and stood in a drizzling rain as inside the 11,600-ton Nippon liner the young prince and consort received a delegation extending welcome to them on behalf of the Dominion, British Columbia and Vancouver.

The mikado's brother, wearing a brown lounge suit, stood beside his American-educated princess as the Canadian officials, in full-dress uniforms of their rank, welcomed them.

Squadron Leader A. D. Bell-Young, wearing the gold-braided grey uniform of the Canadian air force, greeted the imperial couple on behalf of the Dominion's governor-general, whose guests they will be in Ottawa next week.

When the reception was ended the prince stood with the princess, Mr. Bell-Young, Dr. H. L. Keenleyside, representing the Canadian government, and Acting-mayor John Bennett while their photographs were taken in the glare of two-score magnesium flashes.

The prince stood smiling beside the fur-coated Princess Chichibu and did not speak. As the imperial suite left the ship, between lines of ships officers and crews, native-born Japanese and war veterans, who formed a cordon along the wharf-front bowed deeply. They held their salute until the prince's car, escorted by six constables on scarlet-colored motorcycles, disappeared in the crowd.

RECEPTIONS PLANNED The prince and princess went directly to a central hotel to their apartment which occupies three of the 25 rooms reserved for the party. They planned to dine privately and make no appearances in public until tomorrow when a round of receptions starts.

The prince, during his journey from Victoria to the mainland, stood on the deck to acknowledge salutes from more than 200 Japanese fishing vessels, flying banners and crowded with cheering fishermen and their families, and firing rockets.

The prince also stood out on deck as three seaplanes, led by Wing Commander D. R. MacLaren, wheeled and dipped in salute as the ship neared Vancouver.

Prospect point, signal point at the narrows leading into Vancouver harbor, ran the Rising Sun emblem atop its flagstaff as thousands clustered there to watch the ship pass.

Major General Mazaharu Homma, who earned the military cross in the Great War, said their highnesses had chosen to cross Canada on the middle lap of their 10,000-mile journey to the coronation because he wanted to travel as much as possible over British territory.

By GEORGE FINLAY Canadian Press Staff Writer

EDMONTON, March 29 (CP)—Crisis over the "orthodox" budget of Hon. Solon Lou, provincial treasurer, held up the passing of estimates in the Alberta legislature today.

There was no settlement of differences between the insurgent Social Crediters, battling the budget, and the supporters of Premier William Aberhart when the house adjourned at six p.m. until three p.m. tomorrow.

A motion of Premier Aberhart to bring closure of the budget debate into effect was defeated soon after the afternoon session started. There was no recorded vote.

"I have no desire whatever to shut off discussion of the budget," the premier said. He added he had only wanted to expedite the business of the assembly.

WITHDRAWAL BLOCKED Previously, Mr. Aberhart had asked that his motion be withdrawn, a request that would have required the unanimous consent of the house. One member voted against withdrawal.

ROTARIANS SAY FAREWELL TO DOLPH BROWNE AND HIS WIFE

Five Speakers Sing Praises of Popular and Hard Working Citizen; Mrs. Browne Receives a Bouquet; Dolph Pleads for Camp

A five-salvo eulogy of Adolph Browne, and presentation of flowers to Mrs. Browne, in connection with their removal to Vernon, where Mr. Browne is entering in business for himself, made up the program of the Nelson Rotary club Monday when H. M. Whimster, as program chairman, was master of ceremonies for the farewell function.

The opening item was the presentation to Mrs. Browne of a beautiful bouquet by R. E. Potter, president, on behalf of the club. Mrs. Browne graciously expressing her thanks for the gift.

LIFE RICH, SAYS GARLAND

C. B. Garland, first speaker for the "negative"—Mr. Whimster having asserted he had had the greatest difficulty in finding five men willing to say anything good of Adolph Browne—telling "Dolph" he has been deputed with others to wish him and Mrs. Browne godspeed, suggested "Dolph" would look back on his years at Nelson as happy ones. Even should he not be a Rotarian in his new sphere of labor, his association with the club had been worth while. It was agreeable to be told once in a while that one was not so bad, and after all, the test of day-by-day associations with one's fellows was a pretty sound one. Both Mr. and Mrs. Browne were fortunate, he declared, in their capacity to get richness and happiness out of life as they went along. "Dolph Browne will look after that," was one of the commonplace remarks to be heard of many kinds of jobs, particularly in connection with boys' work.

"You will live long in our memories as friends who have given us of your own," Mr. Garland told Mr. and Mrs. Browne, as he wished them health and happiness in their new endeavor.

J. A. McDonald declared that all members of the Rotary club regretted Mr. Browne's going away, for he had been an active member, and as a citizen had been associated with everything progressive. On behalf of the club he wished Mr. and Mrs. Browne every success.

WORK FOR BOYS

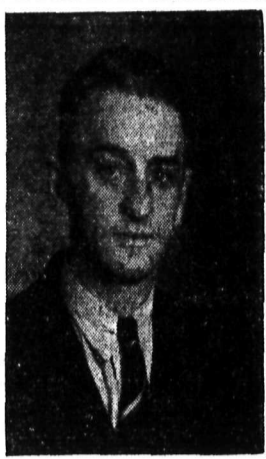

Mr. Browne's identification with boys' work for many years was uppermost in C. W. Tyler's mind as he referred to the youth problem and the influence on it of science's contribution of motor cars, radio, and moving pictures, which, though organized to the last degree of efficiency for box office appeal did not include training of youth in their objectives. The penitentiaries attested the existence of this problem. Opposed to these commercial influences were the churches, the Boy Scout organization, and others of similar type. The Nelson Rotary club, he pointed out, was definitely associated with the endeavor to provide right guidance for youth.

"Dolph," he pointed out, had been chairman of the club's boys work committee for many years, had been practically chauffeur for the Boy Scouts, driving them on trips to the States, had been a shack-builder and had dammed Kokanee creek, among other activities.

The Rotary club, he said, was losing an active member, and the Boy Scout executive one of the best friends it had ever had, and Mr. Browne could have the memory of having dropped into the pool of youth in Nelson a pebble that would have an influence for years to come. Mrs. Browne also deserved well of the Rotary club, having been active as a Rotary Anne and always willing to do any work asked of her. On behalf of the club, Mr. Tyler expressed the hope that they would have the best things in life, and suggested that the Nelson Rotary club's loss would be the Vernon Rotary club's gain.

A GOOD MAN IN TOWN

W. B. Bamford regretted that the club was losing a good Rotarian, and stated he had expressed this sentiment to Mr. Browne a number of times. The community was also losing "a good man in the town." He was active in the board of trade.

DOLPH BROWNE

and when the speaker was in the city council, "Dolph" was the first man to be called on to collect for the Christmas Cheer fund, and similar worthy objects. He wished Mr. and Mrs. Browne all good fortune.

Mr. Whimster closed the symposium himself. Regretting that Mr. Tyler had seen fit to talk of the penitentiary when it was generally understood Mr. Browne was "going to work," he called attention to the club's practice of always presenting a departing member with a "sack of gold." Producing the "sack," which apparently once contained tobacco, Mr. Whimster elaborately presented it to Mr. Browne stating it might help him get to Vernon, and should he want to come back he would have plenty to get back on. The sack was later found to contain a bottle opener and a few Washington tax tokens.

This was the signal for P. G. Morey, pianist, who struck the proper chords, and the members vociferated that Mr. Browne was "A Jolly Good Fellow."

Mr. Browne in reply declared that he had never done any more than a good Rotarian should always be ready to do, and he did not feel that he had done any more than the average member.

It was nice, however, for these things to be said in the presence of his wife, as it might raise his stock at home and possibly increase his authority.

Dismissing his own work with these remarks, Mr. Browne made a strong plea for the Kokanee camp project, which the Rotary club had pressed from the time 13 or 14 years ago when it purchased and promoted the development of a camp area to be used for the Boy Scouts and other boys' and girls' organizations. While the major part of the work was now done, it was essential that it be finished, and he suggested that somebody should be appointed to the chairmanship of the boys' work committee who would carry out this work for sure. The reason for the urgency, Mr.

Browne explained, was the impending visit to Nelson of 75 Boy Scouts from Pullman, Wash., which city last summer opened its homes to Nelson's Boy Scouts. This made the dining hall necessary and it Nelson was to entertain the Pullman boys the way its own boys had been entertained, it would be necessary for the citizens to get behind the Boy Scout association, and a drive for funds would be made.

"I thank all you fellows," Mr. Browne wound up. "We are sorry to leave Nelson, where we have had 12 very happy years, and we would not be leaving if we did not think the move would be in our business interests."

Mr. Potter wound up the meeting by pointing out that the annual nominations were due a week hence and counselling the members to look for a good chairman for the boys' work committee to succeed Mr. Browne, one who would be able to do anything from bridge-building to general trucking.

J. H. Tabor, a member of the Victoria Rotary club, was a visitor

MORE ABOUT Winners in the Badminton

With the gallery hanging on every stroke as the finals were played, the sixth and biggest Nelson badminton tournament came to an end yesterday, and with the finals there closed four days of fine play by an entry that set a record for British Columbia. Suggestion that it was the largest entry in a badminton tournament in Canada was negated when it was learned that Winnipeg a few years ago set a record considerably higher than the current tournament, but there was no question that it was British Columbia's biggest with a total of 437 entries.

Brilliant badminton in every class was a feature of the four-day campaign that attracted a gallery each day and an attentive and close-watching gallery for the finals Monday. The organization was a tribute throughout to the committee in charge.

FAIR STARS

Miss Olive Fair of Salmo shared the spotlight with Miss Margaret Taylor of Kelowna as she figured in all five of the cups taken by the Salmo team of four players. Her sister, Doreen, helped her in winning two of them and her partner in the mixed doubles, Wilfred Hearn, shared in two also.

Perhaps the chief interest of the tournament centred about Miss Taylor, former women's Canadian singles titlist. Kelowna carried off four cups, Miss Taylor winning one and sharing two with Miss Hazel Browne and Allen France, and Mr. France adding the fourth.

Six of the 19 top places were held in Nelson, and half of another, but the only Nelson player to figure in two was Monte Morley, men's open singles champion and sharer with Jim Cherrington of the men's doubles, open.

J. E. Parker took the men's singles handicap cup to Bonnington; John Edwards and Elgin Hill the junior boys' doubles trophy to Cranbrook; Ned Rhodes and Mrs. V. C. Huyche the mixed doubles consolation to Trail; and Mrs. G. D. G. Barvis of Harrop shared the ladies' doubles

GAYETY RULES GRAND FINALE OF BADMINTON

Banqueters Enthroned Hilarity, Banquet and Dance

With the serious business of the tournament and cup presentation over, visiting and Nelson players who took part in the sixth Nelson tournament over the holiday weekend, their numbers swelled by a large number of guests, made merry at a banquet and dance at the civic centre hall Monday night.

There were but two short talks. Musical entertainment was provided by the banqueters themselves as consolation with Miss Jessie Harrop of Nelson.

UPSETS FEATURE

Upsets were a feature early in the tournament, particularly in the men's open events. The defeat of Ned Rhodes of Trail by Benny Montelone of Nelson and of Art Godfrey of Nelson by Nick Solly of West Summerland contributed early and outstanding surprises.

Fortunes of the draw cut down Trail's most likely opposition in the early stages of the men's doubles. Ed Haley and R. C. Webb dropped Ned Rhodes and Art Eldridge; and then with another Trail combination, Ben Coon and Ivor Solly, fell victim to the ultimate runners-up, Benny Montelone of Nelson and R. C. McFadden of Bonnington.

In the mixed doubles, open, Miss Taylor and France in one half and Miss Browne and Cherrington in the other had to cut through stiff opposition to make their way to the finals. This competition provided some of the keenest play of the tournament, and some of the most interesting from the spectators' point of view.

Another department which gave rise to considerable interest was the junior, which indicated in no small measure the rising badminton talent of the southern interior.

The gallery stayed on for the presentation of cups at the conclusion of play, Mrs. E. C. Wragge making the presentations assisted by Ross Fleming, chairman of the tournament committee.

But the chief feature of the four days was the keen interest in the entire tournament and the fine play produced.

with Alderman P. G. Morey at the piano, they sang well known songs and generally permitted made hilarity the rule of the evening. Douglas Chamberlain, president of the Nelson club and banquet chairman, extended thanks to club members, the executive and committees for a splendid season, and paid particular tribute to the tournament committee. He "officially welcomed" the visitors and urged them to return, promising the silverware would be harder to win next year.

Ross Fleming, tournament committee chairman, was interrupted in his talk when the whole gathering sang "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow." Mr. Fleming thanked the visitors for making the tournament "what it was this year," for they had "made the tournament." He also paid tribute to home players, to the ladies' refreshment committee, the entertainment committee, referees, and others assisting, and hoped every visitor would return next year. He especially thanked tournament committee members for their work.

Dancing concluded the festivities.

BOAT OWNERS ACTIVE FOR FIRST TIME

With signs of spring on every hand and the ice gradually disappearing from the lake front thoughts of the Nelson boat-owners are reverted to the summer boating season. The Easter holidays afforded the opportunity and increased activity was noted as boating fans opened up their boat-houses, in some cases for the first time since the beginning of the winter season. In most cases little work was done, but in one instance scraper and paint brushes were brought into use preparing a boat hull for the season.

The ice around the boat houses remained strong, but in many places was worn dangerously thin by the strong current and gave promise of breaking soon.

Can Turn World Upside Down With God's Help Says Adams

Bishop of Kootenay Finishes Mission at St. Saviour's Evening Easter Service; Counsels Congregation to Work

Preaching from John's recorded impression of his vision, "And I saw new heaven and a new earth," at the evening Easter service at St. Saviour's pro-cathedral, Rt. Rev. Walter R. Adams, D. D., bishop of Kootenay, completed his week's mission by urging the members of St. Saviour's congregation to be steadfast, to be loyal to the Cross, to hold firmly together, and to work unselfishly for the schemes of the church.

The kingdom as envisioned by John, said the bishop, consisted not only of great numbers of individuals, but of individuals banded together, and the realization of the objective of a world entirely owing allegiance to Christ could come about only by united effort.

Picturing man as negating God's plans for a good world, Bishop Adams said it was necessary for God to come down to recover the lost possession, and as the only language man could understand was human life, and as man still rebelled, it was necessary for Christ to give His life. But that appeal was successful, and man was conquered, the love of the Galilean winning him.

RESTORATION IN PROCESS

But the process of restoration of the world to a state of Godliness was only partial, said the speaker, and it still had to go on, for the purpose in redeeming souls one by one was that ultimately every single soul was to be saved and the world completely won for Christ.

The object also was not alone to save men's souls for the hereafter, but to win them to right living in this life, and "to make a new earth."

At this point Bishop Adams dealt with men's social obligations and responsibilities and said that a Christian's status was more than something that was his private possession. Old things were to pass away, and there was to be no more pain, according to the vision. This was to be accomplished wholly by man's efforts, and men were not a community of ants without personality, but a community of individuals who, however, respected the rights of others.

All great accomplishments were first seen in vision form, said the preacher, and were embodied in a purpose. Gods purpose might be thwarted, but it could not be stopped. As the Apostles were told they were to be workers with Christ, so also with present-day Christians, who were under the same marching orders.

In the final revelation it was clearly shown, Bishop Adams stated, that it was not only as individuals that God's people were expected to work, but also as a body.

WORK FOR ST. SAVIOUR'S

Addressing St. Saviour's congregation, he said St. Saviour's parish had been very fortunate—had had regular services for many, many years, had been able to build expeditiously after the fire—but still it had much work to do. He counselled the members to look after the schemes of the church faithfully, to avoid pique over incidents, and to avoid taking the view that "that is no business of mine." He urged loyalty to the Cross, and emulation of the Apostles' spirit, and declared that "with God's aid you can turn the world upside down." Analyzing world conditions, particularly those in social relationships, the bishop found that pride and selfishness were the two elements at the bottom of most of the evil in the world. In a nation pride might lead to war.

Selfishness was at the bottom of most wrecked homes, he suggested, the man refusing to play the game, the wife liking her own ease, the man taking to drink, and there being no give and take.

It was also selfishness that was responsible for the commercial evils of the world, and for the disputes in industry.

These evils could be counteracted by the humility of Christ. Who had shown what human character was possible of under conditions of inconceivable stress.

Rev. J. G. Holmes, the rector, preached at the morning services. All services of the day at St. Saviour's were marked with special choral music.

His first year at Osborne; in 1913 he was a midshipman (RIGHT)

The carefree days of boyhood ended abruptly for Prince Albert when he was 13 years of age. Son of a father who loved the sea and who had graduated from the naval ranks with honors, Albert too was destined for a naval career that was to start at the bottom rung of the ladder.

In 1909, home surroundings gave way to the naval atmosphere of the naval training college of Osborne, where the first principles of British seamanship were instilled into the eager mind of the prince. For seven years he was to follow the path that is trod by every up-and-coming naval man who would become part

The engineering side of naval life, of paramount importance in modern sea tactics, absorbed the prince, but eager though he was to work he was even more eager to play. A "thorough good sort" was the way his shipmates classed him, and when physical demands forced him to give up the sea career he had started, the navy was as regretful as the prince.

MOTHER HELPED BY KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN

"I have suffered from terrible constipation since the birth of my first child. I tried everything. Very reluctantly, I tried your ALL-BRAN with no faith in it at all.

"Much to my surprise, I have not had to take any medicine since starting to use ALL-BRAN."—Mrs. Doris Eyre King (address on request).

Common constipation is usually due to meals low in "bulk." Kellogg's ALL-BRAN supplies this needed "bulk."

Within the body, this cereal absorbs twice its weight in water, forms a soft mass, gently sponges out the system. ALL-BRAN also furnishes vitamin B to tone up the intestines, and iron for the blood.

Enjoy this food instead of taking weakening pills and drugs. Serve as a cereal, with milk or fruits, or cook into recipes.

ALL-BRAN is sold by your grocer. Made and guaranteed by Kellogg in London.

COAT OF ARMS TO BE CANADA'S FLAG

OTTAWA, March 29 (CP).—The flag to be displayed at the coronation as the Canadian standard will be "the arms of Canada granted by royal proclamation dated November 21, 1921, with the royal crown at the staff." Prime Minister Mackenzie King stated in a reply tabled today in the house to a question by C. R. McIntosh (Lib., North Battleford).

(The entire flag will be the coat of arms with the royal crown on the staff. It will be the same coat of arms as used on the red ensign.) "Canada has not a recognized distinctive national flag," the answer stated.

British King to Receive Highest Japanese Honor

Only two other living persons hold this order, the Japanese emperor and one imperial prince.

Coming Event Influence in Men's Styles

Men's haberdashery is brightening up. Coronation influence is leaving its mark on men's fashions and this year there are 11 shades in men's suitings called coronation blue. Of these the most popular at present is a steel blue, either with a fine stripe or faint overplaid. Suits this year are fitted slightly at the waist, having peaked lapels and rather conservative shoulders. Comfort is stressed. Overcoats offer an attractive variety of style and color and the raglan sleeve coat that buttons up to the neck should be among those to find popular favor. It drapes easily and is becoming to most men. In ties, all the coronation colors are cleverly combined in stripes or squares and some have motifs of the crown, or an outline of the whole British Empire, neatly worked in. Knitted ties are in again and finding popular favor.

MEANINGS OF WORDS

It is not only radio announcers who should be taught the correct use of words. It is everyone who wants to speak correct English, and there can be no such teaching without out the meanings of words being learned and the elimination of exaggeration from talking and writing. Recently in a broadcast there was a questionnaire about the meanings of words. It was asked what "cyclorama" meant, and an answer given was that it was an instrument for measuring the velocity of cyclones. Evidently it had never been heard of before says the Victoria Colonist.

There are not many of those who use the terms "short-wave" and "high-frequency" who know what they mean, and perhaps fewer still who know the difference between a "cataclysm" and a "holocaust." Other words, the meanings of which are confused, are "chaotic" and "inchoate," "imply" and "infer," "coy" and "demure," "catastrophe" and "disaster." As regards the latter two words Disraeli is reputed to have said that "If Mr. Gladstone were to fall off London bridge, that would be a disaster. If some one were to fish him safely out of the river again that would be a catastrophe."

There is a more classic interpretation of the difference in meanings attributed to Noah Webster, the author of the dictionary in commonest use on this continent. It is recorded that at dinner time when his wife was out of the room for a moment he put his arm around the waist of the maid who was serving at the table. At that moment his wife came back. "I am surprised, Noah," she said. "On the contrary, Dear," he replied. "You are astonished. It is I who am surprised."

DUCE'S DILEMMA

The war in Spain has suddenly reached the stage where the gravest issue of all hangs in delicate balance. Will the frightful folly flicker out, or will it flare into another "world" war?

With Mussolini rests the decision. Hurrying home—driven out of Libya by a "sand-storm"—cutting short a triumphal progress—remembering that only a few days ago he sent congratulatory messages to his volunteers in Spain—he sits today in the Fascist war council considering ways and means of face-saving.

The emergence of oriental despotism as a form of government among Europeans has given an Asiatic tone to continental politics. "Face" is the despot's working capital. He makes face or he loses face, and the fluctuations are as violent as those of wildcat stocks.

With the national economies hopelessly muddled, the dictators have their being in a realm of make-believe, of theatrical drum-beating. The presence of Italian and German troops in Spain has no other object than to divert the minds of the people at home and possibly in the end to provide some bauble to add to the national "glory."

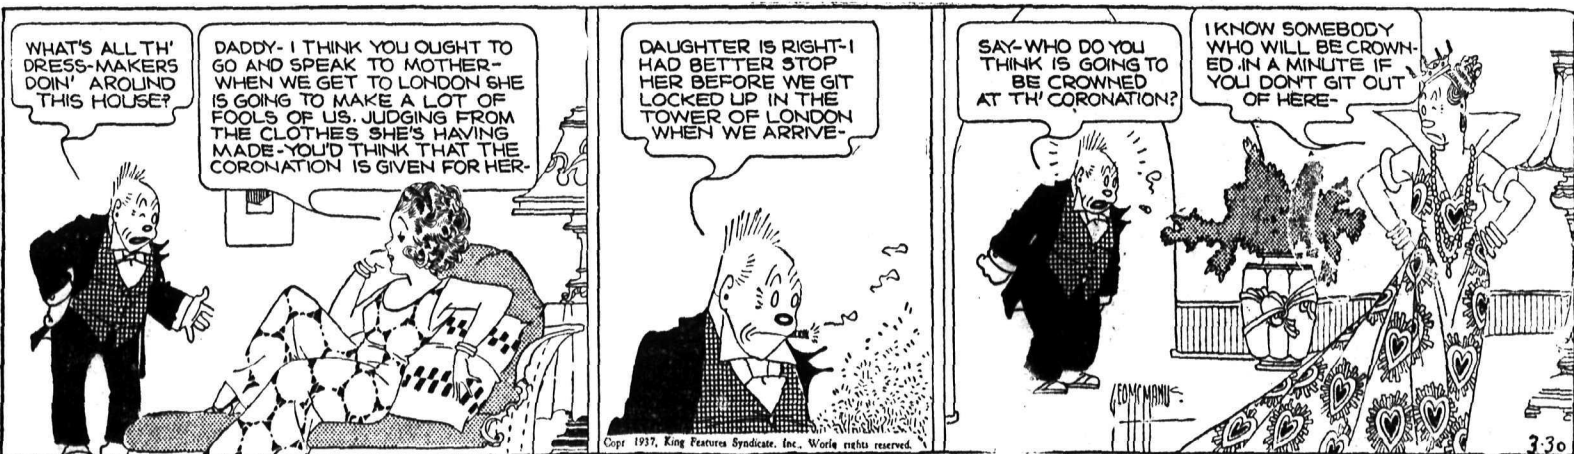

Mussolini pours scorn on "Anglican pulpits"; Dino Grandi tells the non-intervention committee the "volunteers" will not be withdrawn from Spain. Yet is it only a few months since Mussolini declared Italy a "satisfied power" and disavowed aims of aggression.

The non-intervention committee talks of turning to the United States for moral support. That is a confession of failure and probably a vain appeal, for there is little likelihood that the United States, in the throes of a neutrality squabble, will woo trouble.

It is noteworthy that Germany, though nominally on the side of Italy in this affair, is maintaining a discreet silence. The avowed aim of German diplomacy is to avoid offense to Great Britain, to "wean her away from France." The German diplomats cannot have failed to observe that the sympathies of the British public, if not overwhelmingly with the Madrid government, are at least against the use of outside troops.

This, taken together with the report that the German government is irritated over General Franco's failure to pay for goods and services already received, makes it seem probable that if Italy decides to take a strong line she will stand alone. Realization of this, and the knowledge that further provocation would bring reprisals from France, should sober the Roman swashbuckler.

BRINGING UP FATHER

BETWEEN YOU AND ME

J.B.C.: I notice in extreme-right column of page three in March 24 News the following:

"Even the smallest scraps of bread should be saved. Place them in a hot oven until they are crisp enough to crumble, crush finely, and place in a suitable tin and keep them in a cool place."

Why SAVE and KEEP them? Posterily will want fresh bread; not just to look at some we discarded.

Or is it the intention to put them in the Tower of London for safe-keeping?

Yours "JOE."

IT IS REALLY A FILLER

LEMON CREEK

I have received some free verse from a Lemon creek resident who believes the name of the creek should be changed. By publishing his verse I am coming to his aid; but that doesn't mean we should call the creek Lemonade.

There is a creek called Lemon by name,

To brand it so was sure a shame. It is said there is not much in a name,

It sure has ruined this creek just the same.

Of mines there ought to be n any, But Lemon's a hoo-doo would ruin a mint. Even though there were millions to keep it in print, So some one in authority please take the hint.

Even the trout have deserted its pools and its streams, The Lemon, I guess, gave them acidy dreams. The ouzel still bobbing and whistling you will see, But how long with Lemon with the ouzel agree.

Even the government, that much-maligned goat, Such a creek as Lemon must sure have forgot, For of bridges or trails no more can you see, To ford this fair stream you must wade to the knee.

There is gold in its gravel and bars, But Lemon, I think, must have soured it so, How to catch or save it is a puzzle to know, Of Lemon myself I have got such a dose.

I am nothing but bones from the head to the toes, So some one please with enough of pull, Give this creek a name by which it can feel, It is fairly sure of a half square deal.

—A DUMB PROSPECTOR.

LIES AND THISTLES

I heard of a woman who came to a priest
Intent on confession to make;
She had slandered a neighbor, and she thought at least
This slight restitution to make.
The penitent fair was filled with despair
When she thought of her terrible sin,
She said to the priest "Dear Father, I scarcely know how to begin."

Said the priest, "Begin at the beginning
And tell me the whole to the end;
You must tell me your failings and sinnings
And I'll give my advice as a friend."
"Then dear Father," she said, "I have slandered
A neighbor who made me quite mad
And I told people untruths about her
Which have made the poor woman quite sad."

"The untruths I told spread so quickly,
They went all through the town in an hour,
And I just tried my best to suppress them
But I found it was not in my power.
Now I wish I never had slandered
That neighbor, so what can I do
To undo the wrong I have done her?
So dear Father I am trusting to you."

"I am willing to make restitution—
Any penance I'll willingly take;
Oh how can I atone for the evil?
Father, say what atonement to make."

"Go," said the priest, "and gather
A handful of thistles in seed;
Then go out on a plowed field and scatter
This outrageous, obnoxious weed.
"And then as regards to the weather,
Let a good windy day be your choice;

Just scatter the seeds to the breezes,
Now be sure that you take my advice.
For the wind will act as a lever,
To distribute the seed far and wide
Which may be carried across the wide ocean
By its help, and the swift flowing tide."

The penitent's eyes lit up with pleasure,
"Sure that is quite easy," she said
"I can gather the seeds at my leisure
And scatter them," nodding her head.

So she gathered the seeds one morning
And the next was a bright, windy day
So she walked to a plowed field and scattered
The dry thistle seeds, every way.

She waited with delight the seeds flying
Above her, around her, below,
All over the plowed field and meadows
She wondered wherever they'd go.
Then she went to the priest in the morning
And told him just what she had done.

And thanked him for so light a penance,
But he said, "It has not yet begun."
"The seeds that you scattered so easily
Are very obnoxious you see;
I want you to go out and gather
Every one, and bring them to me."
Then the penitent's eyes drooped in sadness;

"Dear Father, forgive me, I pray,
An impossible task you have set me.
Please find me an easier way."

"It's only that I am trying to teach you
How your lies were like thistle seed

And evil tongues, like winds, carry
The lies, like the weeds, till they've grown
Over plowed fields, mountains and valleys,
Through the hamlet, the village and town.
And they grow and distribute their
And no power can e'er put them

POISON GAS

Prof. J. B. S. Haldane, the famous British biologist, organized the defence of Madrid against gas attacks and says gas masks are no protection against the main gases the rebels possess. These are Mussolini's mustard gas, of which a large supply was left over from the Ethiopian war, and Hitler's "blue-cross" gases, which cause excruciating pains in the nasal passages. The best relief, says Professor Haldane, is Jamaica rum.—Brandon Sun.

THE DOCTOR SAYS...

LOGAN GLENDENING, M.D.

DOES DIET RAISE BLOOD PRESSURE?

Why it is that blood pressure has, of all chronic diseases, been so often ascribed to the influence of diet, I do not know, but so it is. The latest studies show not altogether similar results. But at least it is a complete review. All the dietary articles which can influence anything are (1) meat and protein, (2) fats, (3) carbohydrates, (4) salt and other minerals, (5) total bulk, (6) roughage and (7) water.

MEAT—A German investigator, S. Lie, examined 110 monks who had lived on an exclusively vegetable diet and recorded their blood pressures, compared with 115 monks who included meat in their diet. In comparison, the vegetarian monks revealed a distinctly lower blood pressure. This finding keeps bobbing up all the time. But there are too many investigations on the other side to allow its acceptance. Thomas, for instance, in a whole tribe of Eskimos, exclusive meat-eaters, found that the average blood pressure was no different from other people.

FAT—Some observers feel that fat has a blood-pressure raising principle. As compared to meat, for instance, Klinefelter, working on groups of people who were known to be extensive consumers of one kind of an article of diet, found that 83 of those who had high blood pressure were meat eaters, but then 78 were extensive fat eaters. From this it would look as if fat was just as potent as meat in raising pressure.

CARBOHYD ATE AND FAT make for overweight, and overweight is generally acknowledged to be associated with high blood pressure. Whether it is cause and effect is something that seems to me not proved. It is a good thing to deduce overweight on general principles; there is frequently a reduction in blood pressure with reduction in weight, but not commensurate with the weight reduction.

SALT DEBATABLE TOPIC

SALT—This, again, is a debatable topic. Several years ago the salt-free diet in high blood pressure was used quite extensively. Great claims were made for it, but the fact that it has fallen out of fashion would seem to indicate that it did not come up to expectations. Willis, in an experiment on himself, using a low salt and vegetable diet, produced a marked reduction in blood pressure. But, of course, any diet which is low and hence weakening, does that. So many of these experiments demand excessively unbalanced diets that the results are not reliable. American observers have not been able to convince themselves that salt has any effect on blood pressure.

ROUGHAGE and its effect on constipation have not proved to be important factors in lowering of raising blood pressure.

WATER—Plethora hydremica, as the older doctors used to call excessive water intake, receives little attention today. Recent experiments by Holball show that there is no change in the blood volume in high blood pressure, and believes there is no relation between it and high water intake.

Reservoir Settling Tank, Ratepayer Declares

To the Editor:
Sir—The action of the city council at Monday night's meeting puts an end to the discussion on the subject of reservoir construction but it should be noted for future reference that the purpose of this reservoir, as explained by the mayor at that meeting, is that of a settling tank and not that of a storage reservoir. Had the city engineer been advised of his it would have saved him a lengthy explanation of the necessity of a storage reservoir which he gave at the ratepayers' meeting on the Friday night previous.

Incidentally it may be noted that the members of the council who voted so much weight on the result of the water works bylaw evidently did not feel secure enough in their position to permit of a plebiscite on the reservoir scheme detached from the distribution improvements so that as matters now stand no expression of the taxpayers wishes in the matter has ever been recorded.

Does Not Approve of Coercion, Says Plain Blunt Man

To the Editor:
Sir—Mr. Bealby whose letter appears on the 24th instant complains that I have either misunderstood or purposely ignored his purpose in his original four column article on the hospital sweepstakes. One could wish that he had not fallen into the same error when he says of me:

"He objects to let his fellowmen determine their own destinies in the light of their own conscience in substituting his own conscience for theirs under cover of the coercion of legislation."

Now there was not the faintest hint of approval of coercion by legislation or otherwise in anything I wrote. I discussed nothing beyond the moral aspect of gambling of the remedies—legal or otherwise. I said nothing, Mr. Bealby is too well versed in the philosophy of ethics to say that we should do evil that good may come. He will not, a man of his erudition, dare not say—that all the good done by the hospital can give it liberty to violate any canon of the moral code. He evades the real moral issue by hitting back at the moralists who condemn sweepstakes. "You" he virtually says "do nearly as wickedly yourselves," your church raffles are little better than sweepstakes."

Even granting Mr. Bealby his point he has failed to justify sweepstakes. When did the prisoner at the bar ever escape judgment by pleading that others were doing as wickedly as he had done?

When the morality of sweepstakes is under review Mr. Bealby is too clever a logician not to know that he cannot evade the issue by pointing out that church raffles are nearly as bad. Since hospital sweepstakes are at the bar let us attend to them first and then summon church raffles to the bar of justice. For the latter I have no brief. I think church gambling the most offensive of all forms of the evil. If one must gamble he should go to Monte Carlo but do not make church affiliations a cloak for the evil.

Scholar, logician, philosopher, as Mr. Bealby is, he has nevertheless, taken his moral stand on the untenable ground of a sophistry exploded long before the birth of Christ. Gambling does not stand or fall by my judgment of it. It inherently wrong in itself the voice of ten billion human beings cannot make it right. Individual judgment has nothing to do with moral issues. There can be no argument in favor of theft, arson, murder, kidnapping, etc. The man who attempts such simply discredits his own judgment. A favorable verdict from ten million critics could never raise the following lines to the rank of poetry.

"When the price of wheat begins to rise,
Distress from this Dominion flies,
Likewise cheese is increased in price
Which dairymen consider nice."

The critic who pronounced in favor of these lines would blast his reputation as critic beyond repair. That individual judgment counts for nothing attains its greatest force when we consider the moral quality of human action. Mr. Bealby will not dispute me when I say that the crowning achievement of the Socratic school in philosophy was in establishing the fact that the moral quality of any human action was inherent in itself, not in the changing judgment of those who appraised the action. We when pass judgment on the hospital sweepstakes we should remember that our own moral perception and our ability to render sound judgment are themselves under review. The moral quality of any human action lies wholly beyond human adjudication. It is inherent in itself and does not depend on human appraisal. And I advise Mr. Bealby to review the teaching of the sophists and the philosophy of the Socratic school before he takes issues with me on this point.

PALLID BIDDING

I am glad that I was not East's partner when South dealt, the hand shown. West behaved like an angel under most annoying circumstances. Possibly he boiled within, as I would have. East was chronically very anemic in his strategy, under-bidding nine times to a single overbid. Give me a sturdy bidder, looking for games, penalties and slams, even if sometimes he fails.

Bidding went: North, 1-Diamond; East, 2-Clubs; South, 2-Diamonds; West, 2-Spades; North, 3-Diamonds; East, 4-Clubs, ending the auction.

Bidding should have gone: North, 1-Diamond; East, 3-Clubs, to force; South 3-Diamonds; West, 3-Spades; North, pass; East, 4-Hearts, to let West shift back to Clubs, if he must do so.

The opening lead was the 4 of Diamonds. North's Ace won. His partner might hold the missing K, so North led back his 8 of diamonds, which declarer K won. East led back the K of Clubs, giving defenders their second and last trick, but of course declarer scored only 100 points for five tricks won, plus 100 points for honors held. He failed to score the all important premium for the game which he had not bid.

Had the hands been bid properly East would have played a contract of 4-Hearts and made an overtrick. The heart contract would have been somewhat more difficult to play than the club contract, but any fair player would have made an overtrick, as detailed below.

North's Ace of diamonds would win the first trick, clearing North's suit. Declarer would take two rounds of winning hearts with his Ace and K, then he would have to lead clubs, to clear that suit before pulling trumps. If East first pulled trumps, North could run off diamonds, when in with his Ace of clubs, and put down the heart contract. Suppose that North did not win the first club trick. That would do him no good, because dummy, as well as South, could ruff a third lead of the suit, still giving East one overtrick.

With a good partner it is no longer considered necessary to rebid a 6-card suit, before showing a 7-card suit of higher value. Bidder's partner knows that the lower ranking suit is the longer or it would not have been shown first.

CHAPTER 26
 His momentary anger had not been jealousy of a romantic nature the night that he had come upon Janet and Russell Bede on the terrace. He had been angry because he had heard Russell Bede say, "This will be a secret between us. It didn't occur to him for a moment that it was anything but an innocent secret. Yet he hadn't liked Janet to given even that much of herself."

And then he had forgotten all about the incident.
 Forgetting was easy to Joel. He had forgotten that Janet had been upset about Carole Griest and that red-headed girl. It didn't seem possible to him, or wouldn't it if he had known that Janet was jealous of Nina. All of Janet's talk on another occasion about jealousy, he had accepted as something she had heard about and never experienced.

"So what does all this confession lead up to?" he asked affectionately. "Am I to be the irate husband and go out and beat up the fellow?"
 "Oh, Joel, you're so cute! The whole thing is forgotten now but I wanted you to know about it because things get so distorted in telling out here. Someone is sure to tell you that your wife has been shamelessly flaunting a new man while you were away. As a matter of fact," she went on boldly, "I've been having a lovely time. No afternoon bridge sessions, no gab-fests with a lot of girls who never have anything new to say anyway. It's all been nice and healthy and outdoors and if you don't mind I'd rather like to continue for the next three days."

"Why only the next three days?" Joel answered generously.
 "Russell is returning east Saturday and we've some things planned. We're going fishing on Hal's boat Friday. Do you think you can come?"

"Not a chance," he said regretfully. "We're away behind shooting schedule now and we'll be working late for the rest of the week but we'll have a trip to Mexico as soon as we wind up."

"Sure you don't mind if I go?"
 "I'm sure I don't," he answered readily.
 Janet was sincerely disappointed that Joel couldn't go on the fishing party. She was correct in feeling that she needed his moral support. The party was given the last day before Russell Bede's departure and Janet had an uncanny feeling that Russell was going to break his silence.

She didn't expect him to do it quite so abruptly or as surprisingly as he did.
 Hal Schirmer's boat was not a fishing smack. It was a sleek, white yacht, luxuriously appointed on its spacious decks and its lounges and staterooms.

It was big enough to make for privacy for those who wanted it. There were 12 in the party and Janet clung to the groups, avoiding Russell Bede without seeming to do so. He had been strangely quiet on the drive to the harbor and more than once she saw him looking at her in a queer, steady way that was disconcerting. Instinctively, she knew that he was going to say something important to her and she knew she was not prepared for it.

He didn't speak, other than to join the general conversation, until they were steaming back to port. Janet was sitting with Hal and his wife. Russell joined them and Janet was left alone with him when Gertrude Schirmer followed her husband forward to speak to the captain.

"Janet," Russell said without preamble, "will you marry me?"
 "Russell! I am married!"
 "I know that, certainly. I'll ask you again: Will you marry me?"
 Russell Bede sat at Janet's feet on a deck pillow. His face was turned from her and in the few minutes that followed his asking her to marry him, Janet saw in the firm set of his features, lighted by the moonlight, an expression of steady waiting that she had never seen on his face before.

 She saw the man that he was, the man whose will power, whose brain, whose foresight and determination has made a fortune out of a slipping business, the man who was accustomed to getting what he wanted and giving full value in return.
 Oh, yes, he would give full value in return. But he had come too late.

"Russell," she said softly. "I am not only married but I am married happily." Still she didn't say that she loved Joel; she thought that he would have known it.
 "Some day you will marry me," he said evenly. "Janet, I am no boy to speak impulsively. Nor are you a young girl who would misunderstand. I knew the first night I met you that you were the girl I wanted to marry. In these few weeks I have learned much about you—and your husband."

Janet was going to protest that he could not have known anything about Joel but she kept silent.
 "You give and he takes."
 "I like giving," she said simply. "And he likes taking and that is wrong, my girl. The time will come, as it inevitably does in such a design for living as these people out here practice, when that unbalanced weight will topple. Like and like are the only ones who find and use the qualities that survive."

"But Joel and I are alike," she said and thought she said it aloud but it was only a question, not a statement, in her mind.
 "You were a couple of kids who fell in love. Kids who turned out to be diametrically opposite. I am not being impertinent, Janet, in saying this. It's important to me. I know you as well as though I'd known you a lifetime. I know the extent of your courage, your loyalty and your love. And I dare to criticize you. I dare to tell you that you cannot make a success of the thing you have so nobly begun, that you are building a castle on sand. Hollywood marriages do not last. You have the world at your gates, the world that will give more than you can. That world gives things which your husband wants that you haven't got simply because it must be multiplied to have value."

Janet said nothing but her face was as set as his own.
 "Do you talk about the future? Are you building things together? Do tomorrows count in your marriage? Do you believe that you can make this transient thing last? How?"

"Russell, you don't know me. You said that you knew my courage, my loyalty and my love. You don't really know my love. You don't know that it isn't a fragile emotion, that it is more than my heart. It's my everything and with it goes determination and strength. I forgive you for talking about marriage as you have because I can see where you get your ideas out here. You know that Joel is a matinee idol and that women are crazy about him but you don't know him."

It was then that he kept silent. He had learned to judge men, he believed.
 "You don't know what my plans are. You only see that we are childless, that we have no obvious plans for life-long ties. I've thought of those things but these are Joel's years and he shall have them as he wants them. We have all the years of our life together ahead. My marriage is going to last because I'm going to make it last! I'm going to hold my husband only because he'll want to be held. I am equal to meeting all the circumstances that arise in our marriage and when a circumstance arises that threatens its structure, I shall find the open door if I have to look for it! I shall be honest with you."

"You couldn't ever be anything else," he said.

Social News of Rossland

ROSSLAND, B.C.—Any performance by youngsters is always warmly greeted in Rossland, and that by Bill Corey's dancing classes Wednesday evening was no exception to the rule, there being a packed house, and a big hand being given each number on the program.
Louise Vetere, Roberta Bryan, Doreen Ling, Anna Marie Mara, Irene Tipping, Donna Berg and Margaret Wright, garbed in sailor costumes, made a big hit in the "Codfish Ball." Edna Ellis soloed the "military tap" in a way that brought down the house, and then she and Bill Corey did a military tap together. Betty Jean Laface as "Baby" and Patricia Bryan, Mary Vetere, Lorraine Santori Joyce Topfiff, Beth Polvick and Della Woodman as the girls in "Baby, Take a Bow," were conceded the hit of the evening. Geraldine Ferry, Joan Smith, Joan Albione, June Palmer, Pamela Topfiff, Janice Goldworthy, Buddy Thompson and Betty Bradshaw, tiny tots dressed in soldier outfits, won the hearts of every one in the audience, and their performance was a treat. All of these children were just beginners, but they gave a performance which would do credit to those with much more experience. In concluding the program, Edna Ellis and Bill Corey did a soft shoe dance to the tune, "Way Down Upon the Swanee River," and four young ladies, Misses Florence Corrado, Frances Shubok, Gertrude Crawford and Mary Ling did a tap dance to "Let Yourself Go," both of these numbers getting a big hand.

$125 FOR FOUR LYNX TAKEN IN WINDERMERE

LAKE WINDERMERE, B.C.—The Windermere district apparently does not rank lowest by a long margin in fur production.
Last week was reported what is considered the top price for one marten ever received here $125. This marten was trapped by Walter Nixon of Invermere.

This week a successful season for others engaged in the trapping business is revealed.
One real old-timer of the district Murdoch Macleod, is reported to have secured four lynx netting $125, and later two lynx and a coyote, for which he received $95. This does not cover the total of "Murphy's" catch, for in spite of his 70 years or thereabouts, he spends most of his time up in the hills, and is more at home above "timber line." On one of his recent excursions into the wilds he froze his hands and feet, but is now "back on the trail."

Dominique Nicholas and Louis Capilo, Indians from the local reserves, report a catch of 35 martens for which they were offered $950 at Invermere.
Martin Morjeau, another Indian, got 14 cougar—two kittens alive.

MORE ABOUT RAIL STRIKE

Under the agreement, the depression cuts will be erased gradually. Already, the roads have wiped out 1 per cent. The new agreement commits them to give back another by April 1, 1 per cent and December 1, 2 per cent on February 1, 1938, and another 2 per cent at the end of March, 1938.

The joint statement, issued after a conference between railway union leaders and company officers, said the men had sought earlier restoration of the cuts. However, it was stated in the announcement, they "finally agreed" to accept the progressive elimination of the decreases.

PREVENTS STRIKE

Their final agreement to the wage arrangement shut off the possibility of a strike that would have tied up rail transport throughout the Dominion.
The rail union chiefs, in session here for 10 days on the question of calling a general stoppage, said they had the authorization to call the strike. Ballots in their coast-to-coast strike poll, they claimed, were overwhelmingly in favor of a strike unless the railways gave back their cuts in full.

Backed by the ballot, the general conference committee of the unions—composed of about 50 union vice-presidents and other delegates—had been arguing the issue with the roads for more than a week.
Howard B. Chase, chairman of the general conference committee, said tonight he subscribed on behalf of the men to the joint statement issued on the wage settlement. The agreement, Chase said, had been signed by labor officials and it remained only to be approved by a general session of the conference tomorrow.

Peggy, accompanied by Mrs. J. J. Cullinane, have returned from a month's visit to relatives in California.

Griffiths, Mrs. Edgar Jamieson, Mrs. James Porter, Mrs. Gordon Ezart, Mrs. H. A. Baptismal Rites Are Performed at Tabernacle

Congregation of the Bethel Tabernacle in Nelson gathered for worship at a special Easter service in the form of a baptismal service Sunday.
Rev. C. A. C. Story spoke briefly on the place of water baptism in the life of a Christian, basing his remarks on an excerpt from works of Mark "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned."

Among those to take part in the ceremony were Mrs. J. Allison, Miss Ellen Allison, Mrs. Edward Leet and Harry Perdue. Other candidates are to be prepared for baptism within the next few weeks.

During the service Evangelist Elwin Argue sang an Easter solo, and in a trio with Frank Lang and S. Manuel rendered a trumpet number. He also presented a stirring message on "Startling Facts in Connection With Nelson on the Return of Christ" and spoke on the Resurrection and other things related to Easter.

Continue Effort to Recover Truck

Efforts to raise from the lake bottom adjacent to the north shore ferry landing the heavy-duty truck of the A. H. Green company which rolled off the ferry late Friday night, are being continued.
Owing to the truck, which has been pulled up close to the approach by means of an attached cable, being in the path of the ferry, work on the recovery job can be done effectively only after midnight, when the ferry trips are reduced to a minimum, with hour intervals.

CROWD GAY AT KINSMEN CLUB EASTER BALL

Over 100 couples danced and frolicked at the annual Easter ball of the Nelson Kinsmen's club in the Eagles hall Monday night as the Kinsmen opened their year's drive for service work.
The hall, gay in streamers and decorations, essentially predominated by Easter bunnies, chicks and other Easter characters, formed a splendid setting for the gay affair. On each wall a Kin plaque was fashioned, while Kinsmen pennants were strung along each end of the hall.
The profits of the ball are to be devoted entirely to service work.

In the smaller adjoining hall a late supper was served on the beautifully decorated tables. An enthusiastic committee headed by Mrs. George Lee-Warner, who was assisted by Mrs. P. C. Richards, Mrs. Thomas Carew, and Mrs. Louis Choquette, arranged the decorations. The dining hall was arranged by a committee consisting of Mrs. Thomas Shorthouse, chairman, Mrs. Robert Horswill, Mrs. J. B. Stark, Mrs. Carew, Mrs. William McKay and Mrs. C. M. Bennett.

Field Days for Forestry Men

One Group Meets at Cranbrook, Other Salmo Valley
Educational work of the forest branch in the Kootenay-Boundary, for the further training of rangers and assistant rangers, will take the form this year of field days, District Forester R. E. Allen has been advised.
Rangers and assistant rangers in division "A" of the Nelson forest district will be called in for three field days at Cranbrook, April 20-22, when C. D. Orchard, assistant chief forester, will be up from Victoria.
Similarly, the rangers and assistant rangers of division "B," comprising the West Kootenay-Boundary, will be called in April 26-28 for three field days at some point in the Salmo valley, the location not having been finally made as yet.

Last year, for the first time for many years, rangers and assistant rangers from all parts of the district were called to Nelson, where Chief Forester E. C. Manning met them in conference to go over the problems commonly met in the field.

Another benefit entertainment, to supplement the fund being raised by subscription and otherwise to send to the coronation Syd Horswill, Nelson high school student, to represent the Kootenay student body, is being promoted by the Tuxis Boys, in conjunction with St. Paul's Boys Choir, in the form of a concert for the middle of April.

Both the St. Paul's Boys Choir and the Tuxis Boys Choir will be heard, and also individual members in solos, including Syd himself, and a Tuxis quartet, while some of the test pieces of the approaching Kootenay Music Festival will be rendered. Outside artists will also be pressed into service, and a combined piano and organ number is probable. The recent high school benefit dance realized a good sum for the same object.

GYROS HEAR OF THE TELETYPE

An interesting and instructive address on the teletype machine, one of the efficient marvels now in common use, was given by A. L. Creech of the B. C. Telephone company at the meeting of the Nelson Gyro club in the Hume hotel Monday evening. In this Mr. Creech described briefly the operation, method of transmission, mechanism and the basic principle of the machine, one of which he had on display.
The machine was doing away with many employees, he stated, which was about the only black mark against it. The machine was taking the place of about 75 more operators in every 100, but was more than making up for this in efficiency and time-savings. What it formerly took a carrier nearly an hour to accomplish was now done by the machine in about two minutes, he stated, emphasizing the importance of this in stock-marketing, and other commercial fields.
In describing the mechanism of the teletype he stated that about 10 per cent of it was electrical the rest entirely mechanical. Forty to 65 words a minute was the average wordage produced by these machines. He also outlined briefly the great organization of the United Press, Canadian Press and Associated Press.
H. E. Horton paid tribute to H. S. Watson who is soon to leave Nelson, remarking on his and the members' relationship with Mr. Watson and their regret on his departure. He also made a presentation of a large framed picture of Fairview, where Mr. Watson resides. A suitable reply was made by Mr. Watson.
In preparation for the annual Gyro hoedown to be held in April N. J. Lowes was appointed chairman.
In the absence of Dr. H. H. MacKenzie, president, Vic Owen, vice-president was in the chair, with Ado Diebolt, second vice-president taking charge later.
Fred Ewing, who was in charge of the program, thanked Mr. Creech for his interesting talk.

Creston Rotary Survey Shortly
Survey of Creston from the point of view of Rotary possibilities has not yet been accomplished, J. P. Fink reported to the Rotary club Monday, his expectation of paying an early visit not having been realized. At his suggestion, R. A. Peables, who pays frequent visits to Creston for business purposes, was placed on the Creston extension committee to fill the vacancy caused by the removal of Adolph Browne to Vernon, and it is hoped to have a progress report on the matter in another week.
The Nelson Rotary club accepted the responsibility of making the Creston survey, at the suggestion of Governor Charles Mowry of Spokane after the transfer to the Nelson club of J. P. Fink, who headed the Cranbrook committee previously deputized to the task.
